More anarchy from Colin West in the form of zany poems and even zanier pictures. We've all met a 'nasty Normal Noshers', without doubt 'the horriblemest boy I know of', but whether we could describe him as gruesomely as West is debatable. The collection abounds with kid-appeal lunacy, ranging from the eulogy to schoolmeals, 'Eat your food up, Artie', to the Falklands hymn, 'A Penguin's life'. Special favourites are 'Trevor is ever so' and the pathos of 'In monster town'. But get it and find your own favourites. What Milligan started, West has extended to his own art form. Even explaining to us dullards that 'a poet spends his hours/sat in sofas sniffing flowers/and writing rhymes as silly as can be.'
