Karen is Jay's dead elder sister. He addresses her throughout the book, as you know, Karen. Hell, Karen, it gets on your wick a bit, what you might call this confessional device. Know what I mean, Karen? Jay has several strands of his recent life to work out; sixth-form college, Dad's remarriage, friend's accident and new girlfriend. So the story moves along with commentary for Karen who, if she likes Jay as little as I do, must be gyrating in her grave at having her ear bent like this with no means of retaliation.
